

TRANSLATING SOCIAL SCIENCE LEARNING INTO CAREER READINESS

A Faculty Development Workshop

Help students translate what they're learning into what they'll do next—without changing the heart of what you teach.

WHO THIS IS FOR

Faculty teaching in the social sciences who are committed to enhancing the career relevance of their courses, supporting student success beyond the classroom, and bridging the gap between academic learning and professional application.

- Social science faculty
- Department chairs or program leads
- Faculty leaders advancing teaching + career-integrated learning

WHY IT MATTERS FOR STUDENTS

- Increased awareness of transferable skills
- Confidence in articulating readiness for jobs, internships, or grad school
- More meaningful, engaged learning experiences

WHAT PARTICIPANTS EXPERIENCE

- ✓ 5 hands-on and interactive scaffolded sessions
- ✓ A collaborative space to explore what's already working in your courses
- ✓ Guided exercises that turn abstract ideas into practical, personal tools
- ✓ Supportive peer dialogue and feedback from colleagues
- ✓ Confidence in making career relevance visible without compromising disciplinary depth

DELIVERABLES

Each participant leaves with a personalized Career Readiness Playbook that includes:

- A curriculum map showing alignment between course goals and career competencies
- Revised learning outcomes using a transformation framework
- A redesigned assignment or reflection with career relevance
- Student self-assessment and reflection tools
- A career-connected syllabus statement
- A practical, personalized implementation plan

FLEXIBLE FORMATS

Live, In-Person

- 1-Day, multi-day, multi-week
- As a campus-wide, department-led, or cross-disciplinary offering
- As a multi-institutional hosted event
